My educational background is:

I have undergraduate and postgraduate degrees in policy development and a PhD in design in the UK. I have been a practising service designer for eight years and a practising policy designer for the past four years.

I currently work at/as a:

I'm currently Head of Design Policy at PDR, International Design and Research Centre.

I have X years of experience applying service design in projects in order to improve or innovate service offerings for my clients:

8

I have particular experience in the following service sectors:

Financial services, healthcare, business innovation,

I have successfully delivered the following service design projects for my clients:

European Central Bank (3 year contract started in October 2017)

I have a three-year contract with the ECB to provide Service Design training and project expertise to departments across the EU institution. To date, I have delivered six training sessions to over 100 ECB staff members. I have also support the ECB by providing user insights in a project to develop a new online platform. Service Design in a Policy Environment. Client: HMRC (UK tax office)

Through a series of four one-day workshops, I have build capacity for service design by enabling the digital team to understand how their services fit within the policy process. The sessions included 40 staff from digital teams. I am currently working on a more strategic project to enable HMRC to influence the policy process in order to deliver more effective services to users. <http://pdronline.co.uk/blog/2017/10/hmrc-service-design-in-a-policy-environment>

Northern Ireland Innovation Lab

I have had an on-going collaboration with the Northern Ireland Innovation including delivering six training sessions for staff members as well as the wider Northern Ireland Civil Service. I have also performed an in-depth evaluation of iLab: <http://pdronline.co.uk/Portfolio/evaluation-of-niil>

Greenhouse (open service design training session)

With a close colleague, I have developed a 2.5 rapid immersion into service design for government officials. The course, called Greenhouse, takes an applied challenge set by the local council or government to enable participants to apply service design tools to real scenarios. We have been delivering Greenhouse for almost three years including around 10 sessions (open and bespoke). Participants are from across Europe and include UK Government Digital Service, Estonian Social Enterprise Network, Polish Agency for Enterprise and KEPA Business Centre in Greece, among others.

Design for Innovation (EU funded project)

I lead an EU funded project to integrate design into business support programmes. I use service design methods with the eight partners (innovation agencies and business support organisations).

I regularly participate in service design-related activities in order to stay up to date, share my experiences with peers and get their supervision. Within the last 12 months, I have participated in the following activities:

I have participated as a speaker in the following events:

I was a keynote speaker on the final day of the SDN conference in New York in 2015.

The following theories are the key components of my approach to service design:

In government, service design should not operate in isolate from policy design. If you want to change public services, you have to also change public policies.

My philosophy as a trainer/coach is:

It has to be an on-going collaboration. You cannot deliver a two-day course and consider that that is the end of the intervention. For example, I'm now embarking on a long-term contract (three years) to build capacity for service design in the European Central Bank. This will be through a combination of training and live projects.

I have provided service design training sessions for X years:

8

Here is a list of all service design training sessions and/or other educational experiences I've facilitated within the last year:

I mostly provide my offerings in the following language(s):

English (and twice in French)

I mostly provide my offerings in the following countries/cities:

Anywhere in Europe and potentially around the world.

I cover the following topics during my training sessions:

- Leadership/management of service design projects
- Facilitation skills for service design
- Measuring impact of service design, relating it to KPIs
- Working with complex service systems
- Service design for cultural change
- Creativity and ideation processes
- Prototyping of services
- Implementation of service design concepts
- Design and conduct of co-creation workshops
- Differentiation between service design, service marketing, design thinking, service branding
- Building in-house service design capabilities
- User research/deep customer insights
- Connection between service and policy

My training participants typically have the following level of experience:

- Novice (new to service design)
- Fundamental (basic knowledge)
- Advanced (practical application)

These are the most relevant resources I base my work on and I recommend to participants:

We have developed our own Greenhouse guidebook with a range of service design tools.

These are the service design methods and tools that I use during my sessions:

Tools for Explore phase: Problem Definition, Policy Map, Stakeholder Map, User Research Framework, User Stories, Personas.

Tools for Elaborate phase: User Journey Mapping, Ideation, Speculative Design, Prototyping, Storyboards.

Tools for Expand phase: Service Blueprint, Service Roadmap, Action Plan, Evaluation Framework.

These are my favourite cases I use to inform about the impact and value of service design:

We use our own service design examples: http://pdronline.co.uk/Portfolio?rpg_type=4

I apply the following evaluation tools to make sure the participants have understood the content of my sessions and gained the expected competences/skills:

Pitching back to the group and a short survey.

After successfully attending my training sessions, participants will typically be able to:

Be able to use the tools listed above, either on their own or with additional facilitation.

I always ask for feedback on my offerings and I systematically evaluate and improve. Examples of some feedback that led to improvements:

Self-assessment by

Particularly with ECB, each intervention (workshop) is evaluated. As such we have iteratively improved the tools, guidebook and examples.
